Jacob Raupach is an artist based in Wagga Wagga, NSW, graduating with a Bachelor of Visual Arts (Honours) from Charles Sturt University in 2013. Jacob's practice exists at the intersections of photographs, artist books, sculpture and installation. Through these mediums he investigates the invisibility of labour, the relationship between natural and societal environments, and the ways in which art as a practice can help to alter and re-write our perceptions of place and history. His work has continuously tried to address these issues through the production of artefacts that deal with abstract forces like capitalism, climate change and systemic invisibility and oppression via a realist and documentary aesthetic.
